

The KCMH cardiac center proudly launched a new device for percutaneous closure of ventricular septal defect (VSD). The device was created by Pornthep Lertsapcharoen, MD, and made of Nitinol. Of 16 patients with VSDs, 12 patients underwent successful closure without a need for open heart surgery.

Read more